Herbie and the Tune

“Passenger number 230867, passenger number 230867, please report to the check-in area.” A female voice echoes through the terminal, but there is no response.

*H*erbie shuffles a little in his seat, lost in the beautiful music that surrounds him. He is, of course, passenger number 230867, but his full attention is elsewhere. To be honest, he doesn't quite know where the melody is coming from, but as always, he soaks it up like a thirsty sponge. The notes flow like a peaceful river gently wandering to and fro through the gorgeous countryside. Some call it the music of angels. Others don't call it anything at all. They just listen, and enjoy.

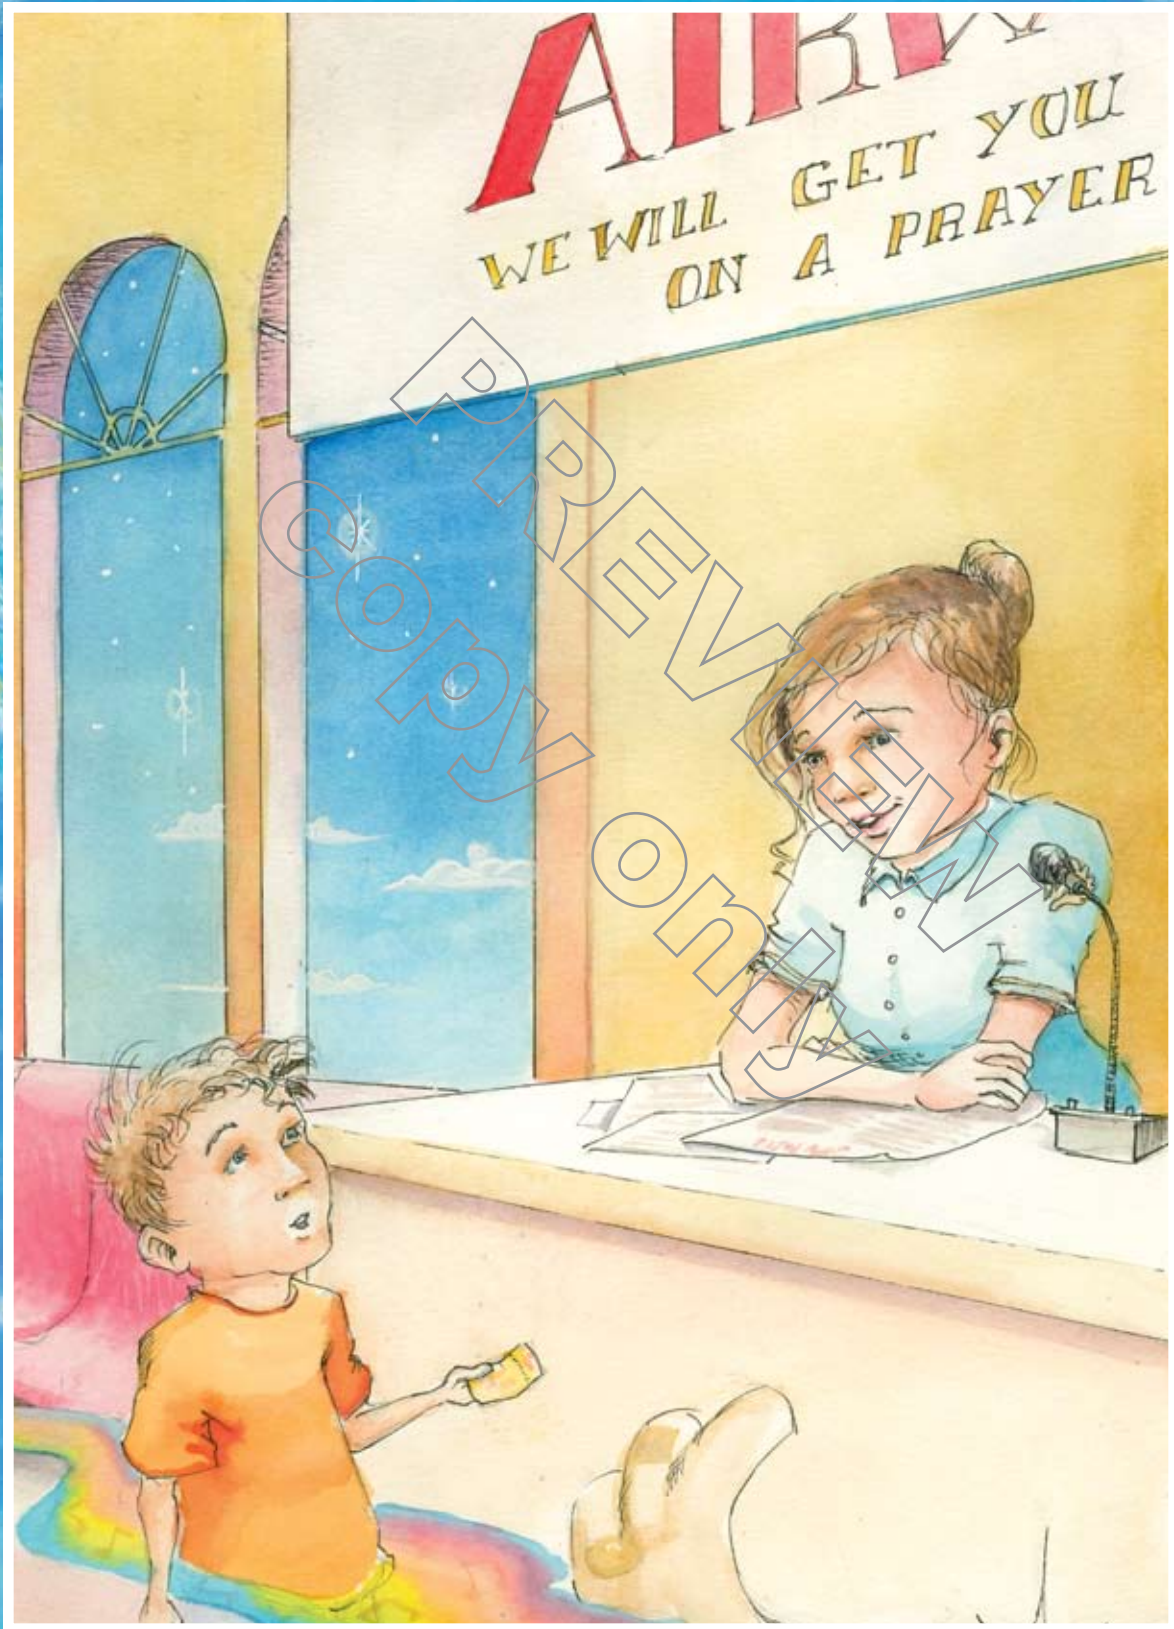

Without knowing it, Herbie hums along. He often liked to hum along. The angelic music has been his constant companion for as long as he can remember, as it has been for everyone here. It's just how it is.

“Final boarding call for passenger number 230867.”

With unending hope, the lady at the counter tries one last time. The loud announcement startles Herbie and he jumps to attention. ‘Oops a daisy,’ he thinks to himself. As he walks over to the desk, he reads a large sign that hangs above the lady’s head.

‘Heavenly Airwaves: We will get you there on a prayer.’

“Hello,” says Herbie quietly, “I am passenger two, three, umm, hmmm, the one you just called. But you can call me Herbie.”

The lady smiles, and types some numbers into the computer.

“Yes, Herbie, we’ve got you booked on the next flight to the physical realm. Or as I like to say, where your destiny is density.”

“Huh?” replies Herbie, forgetting his best manners for a moment.

“Oh, no matter,” says the lady, “but I need to ask, are you a frequent flyer?”

“A freak and fryer?” exclaims Herbie, a little frown suddenly appearing on his face.

He was beginning to have second thoughts.

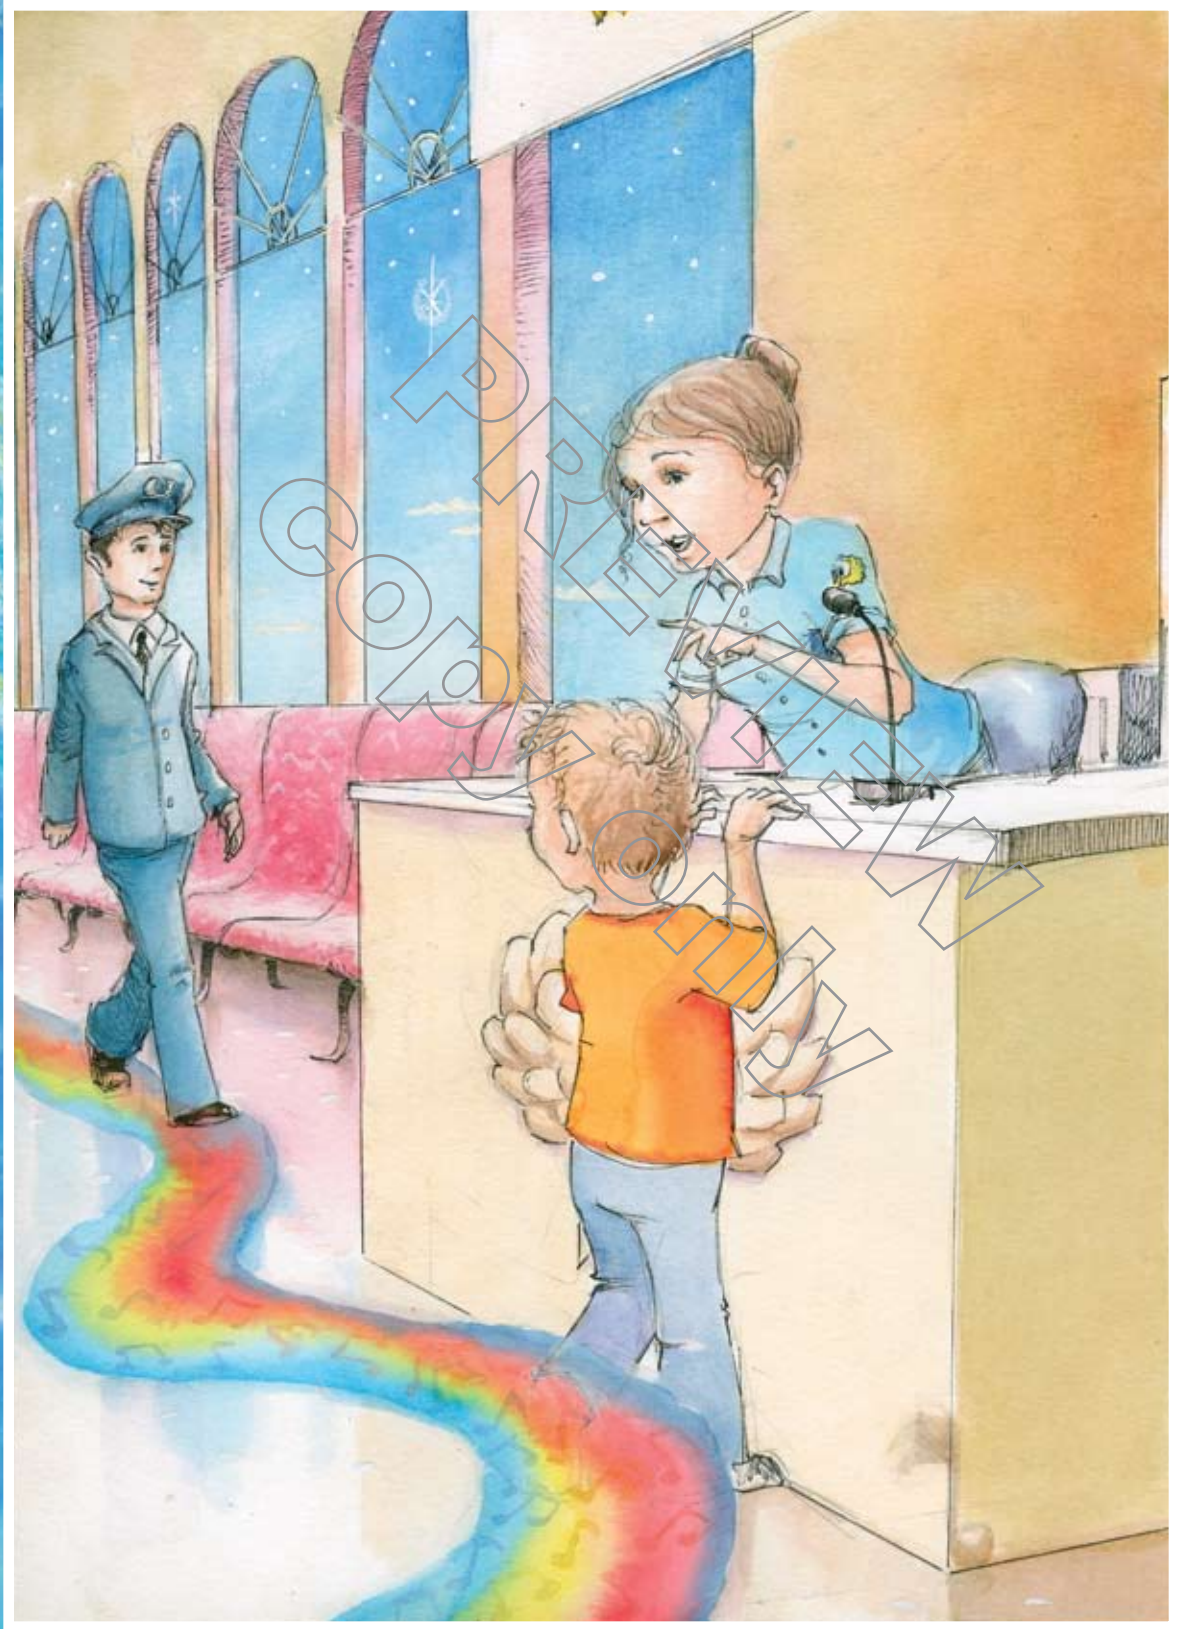

The lady spots Herbie's concern in a second, and offers some kind words of comfort.

“It's okay Herbie, you will really enjoy the trip. It's such a lovely time of the century to visit Earth, plus, you'll be there in the blink of an eye.”

But Herbie's frown does not turn upside down. It stays put!

“Hmmm, I'm not sure if I want to go. Can I please talk to the pilot?” Herbie inquires.

“Of course my dear,” replies the lady, “in fact, here he comes now.”

“Hello Herbie,” says the pilot in a friendly voice.

“Hello Mister Pilot,” says Herbie, all the while wondering how this man could possibly know his name.

“You don’t have to travel now if you don’t want to Herbie,” the pilot explains, “just hang on to your ticket and use it whenever you want. There are no expiry dates, and definitely no cancellation fees either!”

Herbie places his index finger on his nose, and taps away gently.

“Hmmm.”

“Before you answer,” says the pilot, “it would be nice to talk a while. Is that alright with you?”

“Okay then,” Herbie happily agrees.

Share with Me

1. If you were able to talk to Mr Pilot, what would you ask him before you visited Earth?
2. What are some of the things you like to do that make you feel as happy as a piglet in mud?
3. When you are quiet and listening to nature...can you hear your Tune?
4. If you can imagine the Tune, what do you think it would sound like?
5. Why do you think Herbie chose to come to Earth?

Meet the Author - Bradley Kyle

Born in Melbourne, Australia, Brad has travelled the world extensively, fuelling his thirst for knowledge beyond these shores and this life as we know it. He lived in London for more than five years where he wrote a number of unpublished children's stories, eventually returning to Sydney for another three years.

Though an accountant by trade, Brad has always been a writer by nature, and his published works are the inevitable result. He credits his major turning point in both his writing career and life to an 800 kilometre walk across Spain in 2007. It was in every way, a life-changing pilgrimage. His primary hope is that his words bring inspiration and evolution to the reader, whether old or young.

He now lives in Melbourne with his beautiful wife Ruth, only moments away from the house of his childhood.

Meet the Illustrator - Gabriel Evans

Gabriel Evans is a nineteen-year-old artist born in Western Australia. He was home-schooled on a twenty-acre hobby farm in rural WA and draws much inspiration for his artwork from the surrounding countryside and Blackwood River.

With a diploma in Visual Arts and Crafts, Gabriel has won numerous prizes for his portraits, landscapes and still life studies and has exhibited his work throughout WA. He works mostly in watercolour, oil, acrylic, charcoal and pen and ink and is inspired by artists such as Arthur Rackham, Norman Thelwell, Cicely Mary Barker, William Bouguereau and Helen Allingham.

He has appeared as artist-in-residence at many public events, festivals and educational institutions, gives workshops on art and illustration, and has been a guest speaker in libraries and schools.

Gabriel and his brother Jacob have a greeting card business. Their cards are sold through galleries and retail outlets in Australia and the UK.

Gabriel is also the Illustrator for:

- Pick-a-WooWoo: Born to Love Frogs
- Pick-a-WooWoo: Oceans Calling
- Pick-a-WooWoo: The Star Who Lost Her Sparkle
